Cabbie jailed for manslaughter of missing lover

Jailed: Kevin Doherty has been convicted for the manslaughter of his lover after she vanished

A MAN has been jailed 17 years after his lover disappeared and was never seen again.

Cab driver Kevin Doherty, 57, was sentenced to 12 years in prison for the manslaughter of Jane Harrison after she disappeared in 1995.

The 32-year-old was last seen on June 15 1995 in Wood Green Shopping City with Doherty.

Ms Harrison, had a one-year-old son with Doherty and a 14-year-old son from a previous relationship.

Her body has never been found.

On Tuesday last week, Doherty, now of Buckhurst Hill, Essex, who was arrested on May 29 last year, was convicted and sentenced at the Old Bailey.

As the last person to see Jane alive, he had initially been treated as a witnesses when she first disappeared.

As the investigation progressed he was arrested on suspicion of abduction in July 1995.

However, there was not enough evidence at that stage to charge him and the inquiry ground to a halt.

But when detectives revisited the case in 2010 and carried out mobile phone analysis, they found that Doherty's accounts and alibi didn't stack up.

He claimed he had spoken to Ms Harrison a number of times after she was last seen – but this was disproved.

Investigating officer Detective

Inspector Dermot Carroll, from the Homicide and Serious Crime Command, said: "The conviction is the culmination of a long investigation and I am very pleased for all those who worked on this case and for Jane's family that Doherty is now facing prison.

"At last Jane's family have got the justice they have sought for 17 years. They never gave up and it is sad and unfortunate that Jane's mother passed away before she saw this day.

"Doherty has kept his lie for almost two decades. He has persistently lied to police, Jane's family and to his own family and friends.

"I only hope now he has the decency to tell us what happened to Jane."

Traders pledge to boost high street

TOTTENHAM traders and Haringey Council have pledged to clean up the High Road and boost job opportunities for local people.

The Tottenham High Street Charter, which was unveiled on Thursday evening by the Tottenham Traders Partnership, sets out a list of commitments by businesses, the council and police to make the high street a more welcoming place for shoppers and residents.

Businesses have pledged to offer jobs and work experience opportunities to Tottenham people, make sure their shop fronts are clean, attractive and well-maintained and ensure signs are in keeping with the area's heritage.

Councillor Alan Strickland, cabinet member for economic development, said: "Boosting trade, jobs and visitors on Tottenham's high streets is a key part of our plan for the area's huge regeneration.

"Improving the High Road needs to be a team effort – that's why I'm so pleased that the council, local traders and the police have come together to make these pledges.

"Our local traders are not only vital to the local economy, but also can play an important role in regenerating our high streets."

And Moaz Nanjuwany, chairman of Tottenham Traders Partnership, said: "Over the next year we want to improve the first impressions of Tottenham and make it a place that attracts visitors."

Tree huggers united

HARINGEY Council is staging its next tree walk around the St Ann's area of the borough on Saturday.

The walks, which are led by tree wardens, teach participants about trees in the street as well as any necessary maintenance.

The event starts outside the Chestnuts Cafe, in Chestnuts Park, St Ann's Road, at 10am and is expected to take about an hour.

MAN GUILTY OF GIVING GUN TO MARK DUGGAN

A DRUG dealer has been convicted of supplying a gun to Mark Duggan, whose fatal shooting by police in Tottenham just minutes later sparked the 2011 summer riots.

Kevin Hutchinson-Foster was found guilty on Thursday at the Old Bailey of giving Mr Duggan the gun just 15 minutes before he was shot dead on August 4 2011.

The 29-year-old's death in Ferry Lane sparked riots that swept across London and other English towns and cities.

Hutchinson-Foster, 30, who is already in prison for drugs offences and was on licence at the time he gave Mr Duggan the gun, had already pleaded guilty to using the same gun to threaten people in a barber's shop just six days before, as well as using it to "pistol-whip" a hairdresser.

He was seen on CCTV threatening Peter Osadebay in Dalston, east London, then returning and beating him with the gun until he nearly lost consciousness. Hutchinson-Foster had pleaded guilty to possessing a firearm with intent to cause fear of violence and assault occasioning actual bodily harm.

He denied selling or transferring a prohibited firearm to Mr Duggan between July 28 and August 5 2011.

A jury failed to reach a verdict in an original trial, prompting a retrial at the Old Bailey leading to his conviction.

He will be sentenced on February 26.

The court heard that Mr Duggan, who was under police surveillance, had gone in a minicab to Leyton, east London, where he collected the BBM Bruni Model 92 handgun in a shoebox from Hutchinson-Foster, before continuing to Tottenham.

The cab was pulled over by armed police in four unmarked cars in a "hard stop" and as Mr Duggan got out clutching the gun, he was shot by CO19 officers.

After the verdict, Chief Superintendent Dean Haydon, from Scotland Yard's Trident gang crime command, said: "There is an ongoing IPCC investigation into the death of Mark Duggan and the circumstances of his death will be a matter for the coroner at a later date."

He said there had been a 20 per cent reduction in gun crime over the past four years, adding: "The Kevin Hutchinson-Foster trial has primarily been about the supply of an illegal firearm and I welcome the verdict of the jury in this case."

MPs' stance on gay marriage

David Burrowes
Conservative
Enfield Southgate

"I AM voting against the bill. I support the institution of marriage defined in law as a union between a man and a woman.

"I recognise the value of loving and committed relationships and respect civil partnerships, but marriage has a distinctive value that reflects how a man and woman complement each other – this can be seen in parenthood.

"I fear that the bill will change the meaning and purpose of marriage and eventually undermine it.

"I am also concerned about the impact upon the freedoms of religion and conscience."

By Ruth McKee

NEW laws that would make it legal for gay couples to marry were voted on by members of the House Of Commons last night.

And with broad support among Liberal Democrat and Labour MPs the bill looked likely to be given the green light.

Although the origins of the bill started with Prime Minister David Cameron, one of Enfield's Tory MPs, David Burrowes, has been a vocal opponent of the move to legalise gay marriage from the outset.

And as yesterday's vote approached, he has become increasingly outspoken against the government's plans.

In light of the bitter arguments that have broken out within political parties over the vote we asked each of the borough's three MPs how they were planning to vote and why.

Nick de Bois
Conservative
Enfield North

"I WILL be voting against this bill. I strongly support civil partnerships, which allow same-sex couples to show commitment to each other in their relationships and ensure they get the same legal rights as a married couple.

"But I do not believe proposals to redefine marriage should be followed while there is such strong opposition from the Christian, Muslim and Jewish faiths.

"Also, I am concerned future legal challenges either in the UK or in Europe could lead to churches, mosques and synagogues being forced to perform same-sex marriages.

"For me, the potential for this to happen is too great a risk to give my support to the proposal."

Andy Love
Labour
Edmonton

"I WILL be voting for the bill because I strongly believe that same-sex couples who want to make a long-term commitment to each other should be able to do so without being discriminated against.

"I remember when the last government introduced civil partnerships – there were lots of people who were opposed to the legislation then.

"I feel that it is long past time to pull down the last barriers to equality on this issue.

"Research shows that 80 per cent of adults under the age of 50 support same-sex marriage.

"For those who oppose it, the new legislation is sufficiently robust to allow for freedom of religion – meaning that no church or faith can be forced to conduct a same-sex marriage if they do not wish to do so.

"Our laws have to be fair and inequalities must be addressed head-on.

"This new law does that and allows everyone, regardless of their sexual orientation, to enjoy the same rights to build a happy, lasting marriage."

Protesters occupy hospital tower at end of cuts march

By Koos Couvée

koos.couvee@nlhnews.co.uk

MORE than 300 people marched through Enfield on Saturday in opposition to plans to close accident and emergency and maternity services at Chase Farm Hospital.

Following the march, which finished at Chase Farm, in The Ridgeway, Enfield, eight protesters occupied the clock tower in the grounds of the hospital, and remained there between 3pm and 8pm, until police officers asked them to leave.

The march, organised by the North East London Council of Action started at the war memorial at Chase Green before the protesters moved through Enfield on their way Chase Farm.

Demonstrators listened to speeches by Kate Wilkinson, founder of the Save Chase Farm campaign, Bill Rogers, NELCA secretary, and Anna Athow, former consultant surgeon at North Middlesex Hospital in Edmonton.

Mr Rogers said: "We had a very lively march. People are clearly concerned about the sackings of administrative workers going on at the hospital at the moment and the imminent closures of A&E and maternity services, which will cost lives."

"We had a brief occupation of the clock tower and we will continue with pickets at the hospital in the mornings, so watch this space."

Mrs Wilkinson added: "It does not make any sense to close A&E and maternity services. Almost 4,000 babies are born at Chase Farm every year and Barnet Hospital does not have the capacity to take

Moving in: A group of the protesters occupied the clock tower for a few hours on those numbers, and its A&E department was initially built for 40,000 patients a year only.

"It's insane that managers think they will be able to cope without Chase Farm. We currently have no confidence that the NHS has either the financial or managerial capability to deliver the additional services needed at Barnet and North Middlesex to cope with loss of services."

The march was supported by Barnet Unison and the London Fire Brigade Union, and came a week after more than 20,000 people marched through south London in protest at the downgrade of Lewisham Hospital.

In January, health chiefs approved plans that would see A&E and maternity services removed from Chase Farm in November.

Health supremo Hunt set to meet Chase Farm delegation

ENFIELD North MP Nick de Bois has secured a commitment from Health Secretary Jeremy Hunt to meet Enfield politicians over the decision to downgrade Chase Farm Hospital.

The meeting is scheduled for March and the cross-party delegation will include Edmonton MP Andy Love, Enfield Southgate MP David Burrows and Enfield Council leader Doug Taylor, as well as senior council officers.

By then, the independent monitors appointed by the council to assess services at Chase Farm will have finished their report and their findings will form a crucial part of the meeting.

Alev Cazimoglu, chairwoman of the council's health and well-being scrutiny committee, said: "I welcome all representations made to the Secretary of State. This is exactly what we have been pushing for – an attack on all fronts."

"Mr de Bois promised to save Chase Farm and that is what the residents expect."

"The real issue is not PFI debt but the lack of recognition of need and the potential takeover of the hospital by the Royal Free. Government cuts to NHS funding are making it difficult for some hospitals to meet their PFI commitments."

Last month NHS London announced that it had approved the business case for the controversial Barnet, Enfield and Haringey Clinical Strategy, which would see A&E and maternity services at Chase Farm axed in November.

Patients will be sent instead to North Middlesex University Hospital, in Sterling Way, Edmonton, or Barnet Hospital, in Wellhouse Lane, High Barnet.

Some patients with minor injuries could be treated at a new urgent care centre at Chase Farm, for which £12million has been allocated. It will be open for just 12 hours a day.

As part of the government's decision to downgrade Chase Farm, residents in Enfield have been promised that primary care across the borough will be expanded.

Speaking out: Anna Athow, former consultant surgeon at North Middlesex Hospital

Outlook bleak for Broomfield House

Dismay as £4million funding bid is rejected

By Ruth McKee

CAMPAIGNERS for the restoration of Broomfield House have been left devastated after their bid for Lottery funding was turned down last week.

The Broomfield House Working Group had worked alongside Enfield Council to submit a £4.175million bid to the Heritage Lottery Fund to restore the 16th-century manor house in Broomfield Park, Palmers Green.

And although the council and the working group had been hopeful of success, last Wednesday they were told that they would not be receiving any money from the fund towards the restoration project.

Colin Younger, a member of the working group, admitted that the decision by the HLF was a massive setback to the campaign to return the fire-ravaged house to its former glory.

"We are bitterly disappointed by this decision as it was an opportunity to restore, not just a building, but an important heritage site that would have provided significant education and social benefits to the whole community," said Mr Younger.

"We have had extensive discussions with the Heritage Lottery Fund and we thought if they had any issues with the bid, they could have come back to us for further clarification.

"We understand also that council finances are extremely tight at the minute, so they would find it very difficult to fund us all themselves."

Fire-ravaged: Broomfield House

The council's cabinet member for regeneration Del Goddard echoed Mr Younger's disappointment and said: "Following the Heritage Lottery Fund's decision we'll have to give serious consideration to how we go forward from here and consider what the future holds for Broomfield House."

Sue Bowers, head of Heritage Lottery Fund London, said: "We did have concerns about the scale of the restoration project, the level of grant request and the long-term sustainability in the current economic climate.

"We simply did not have enough money to support all the applications we looked at."

However, despite the setback, Mr Younger is determined to keep the project alive.

"HLF officers have indicated a willingness to meet to examine future options and next steps. I don't think that this can be read as closing the door on us," he added.

Asbestos scare keeps school closed

By Ruth McKee

ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk

PARENTS of pupils at beleaguered Broomfield School are facing a third week of uncertainty after asbestos was discovered at the school last week.

The secondary school, in Wilmer Way, Arnos Grove, has been closed to most students since January 21 when pupils were sent home after one of the heating pipes burst during last month's freezing temperatures.

Repair work on the damaged pipe took place the following weekend, but instead of fixing the problem, repair teams found asbestos.

The school confirmed the discovery on its website last Thursday morning and headteacher Peter Travis said: "Unfortunately, we are not yet certain when the school will reopen.

"We have received confirmation that there is some asbestos in the area of the underground leak.

"We do not yet have a time scale of the length of the process now to be followed, which may include notifying the Health and Safety Executive before removal can take place and repairs to the pipe be made. We hope to know shortly."

As of Monday, individual year groups were allowed into the school on a rota basis with Year 7 pupils still off completely, Year 8 students in school for a two-hour afternoon session and Year 9 pupils attending morning lessons.

According to the website, Year 10 pupils are on work experience throughout this week and Years 11-13 are having normal lessons.

However, one mum with a son in Year

"I understand that these things happen and I appreciate they are working hard to fix this, but that does not mean that we

Only pupils sitting exams and Year 11 students were allowed into the school last week.

Council must make cuts or face uncertainty, say Tories

CONSERVATIVES have criticised the council's Labour administration for not planning responsibly for future cuts, saying it is putting the local authority at risk of dropping off a "fiscal cliff".

Michael Lavender, leader of the council's Conservative group, derided Labour for being irresponsible in the face of austerity – and at last Wednesday's full council meeting he said the authority must look at new ways of saving money.

Mr Lavender said: "The administration has a clear choice – either it prepares for cuts, makes the tough decisions, or faces a financial tipping point threatening the long-term financial health of the authority.

"The council needs to stop spending unnecessary money and look at new ways of reducing demand for services, for instance by making buy-to-let less attractive and housing homeless people outside the borough, where rent is cheaper."

But Del Goddard, cabinet member for regeneration, said that the Tories' position was fatalistic and it was hard to predict the level of future Government funding.

"To make deep cuts in our budgets in anticipation of further Government cuts would be very irresponsible," he said. "It is hard to tell what future Government funding will look like and if you cut too far and too fast now, you risk losing vital resources for the future."

"The council has a sensible, year-by-year fiscal policy in the face of the Government's haphazard approach."

"We never know what money will come at us next or what will be taken away, as we saw with the council tax benefit cut."

"We see local government not just as an administrator of services but also as a driver for economic growth. The real problem is the relationship between local and central government, which needs to be addressed so that we can do more."

To balance the books, the council has planned to save £81million over four years – 27 per cent of its overall budget.

In November, the cabinet agreed £8m of efficiency savings, but another £15m must be found from the 2013/14 budget.

The council has confirmed the budgets for youth services and the environment will be protected from the cuts.

The final budget is expected to be approved at March's full council meeting.

Benefit claimants will have to pay 20 per cent of their council tax bill

By Koos Couvée

THOUSANDS of people on benefits will have to pay almost 20 per cent of their council tax bill for the first time in April after councillors approved new measures last week.

Starting in April, 27,000 working-age residents currently receiving council tax benefit in Enfield will have to pay 19.5 per cent of their council tax bill.

It comes after councillors voted in favour of the new rules at last Wednesday night's full council meeting.

All 32 Labour councillors voted in favour while Enfield's Conservatives, who had proposed a different system, abstained.

The money for council tax benefit is paid for by central Government, which has reduced the amount it will pay to local authorities by ten per cent for 2013/14, leading to a £5.1million shortfall for Enfield.

Each authority has been told by the Communities and Local Government Secretary Eric Pickles, it should find its own way of absorbing the cut, under a system known as council tax support.

The council is raising the tax on working-age claimants to 19.5 per cent because it expects an increase in the number of claimants as a result of more people moving into the borough.

Options: Andrew Stafford

It estimates that collection rates will be around the 50 per cent mark.

The borough's 12,800 pensioners, ex-armed services personnel and war widows who receive the benefit will not be asked to make any contributions.

Andrew Stafford, cabinet member for finance, said: "We have looked at the preferred options after a consultation with residents and we believe this is the fairest option as it has the most proportionate impact on claimants."

The Labour administration defeated an amendment which would have allowed the authority to receive a one-off £670,000 payment from the Government, dubbed "Pickles money" by councillors.

If the council accepted the money, it would only be able to ask for an 8.5 per cent contribution from those on council tax benefit.

Michael Rye, Conservative councillor for Enfield Town ward, said: "The consultation process was deeply flawed because of the complexity of the changes."

"We should accept the Government funding this year and then properly consult on the changes to the system for next year."

But Achilles Georgiou, deputy leader of the Labour group, said: "The Pickles money is a one-off payment and because we could only ask for an 8.5 per cent contribution from residents on benefits it would still leave us with an £800,000 funding gap, which means money has to be taken away elsewhere, and it would be an extra burden on the authority."

To absorb a part of the reduction in funding, the council is removing exemptions and discounts on second homes and charging a premium of 20 per cent on properties left empty for more than two years. It expects these measures to raise around £900,000.

With more than 39,000, Enfield has the second highest number of council tax benefit claimants of all the London boroughs, currently costing the local authority £37million a year in reduced bills.

Popping up in one place and another

On the move: Nikki Killeen set up shop in Enfield last week and will be in Southgate from Friday

By Ruth McKee

A NEW pop-up shop selling gifts and homewares is hitting Enfield and Southgate.

The shop, which opened in a vacant store in Chase Side, Enfield, last Friday, is being run by Nikki Killeen, 40.

But Nikki, of Graeme Road, Enfield, will be packing up her stock on Friday and moving to Vic Smith Beds, in Dennis Parade, Southgate, where she will be selling her products from the salesroom for two weeks.

"The feedback so far has been absolutely fantastic and people actually said they were disappointed when they found out I was only there for a short period of time," she told the Advertiser.

According to the mum-of-three, her pop-up shop offers a little extra for the casual browser.

"I also have a playroom in the shop," she said. "I find that so many of my customers are mums with young families, it makes sense to do something to give the mothers a bit of a break as they have a look around the shop."

Nikki opens gift shop in Enfield ...before moving on to Southgate

Nikki believes that pop-up shops are the ideal solution for boosting town centres in difficult economic times and says the council should be encouraging people to take on short-term leases.

"There are so many empty shops," she added. "I really think it is tragic when you see an empty shop front. The council could really boost how people feel about their town centres by making it easier to do something like this."

Nikki's Homewares and Gifts is operating out of 141 Chase Side until the move. She also sells from her Facebook page at www.facebook.com/pages/Nikkis-Homeware-and-Gifts

COMMENT

Unacceptable

NO matter what our political persuasion we put a certain amount of faith in our local politicians. Whatever their political party, we still expect them to put their constituents first.

When someone is elected in a democratic process they are bound to represent not just those who once put a cross beside their name, but also for everyone in their constituency.

By default, a councillor in Enfield should be fighting for the best interests of every single person in the borough.

So, regardless of whether a councillor had his account hacked or put inflammatory remarks on a social networking site of his own accord, the fact remains his name is attached to images that many of his own constituents would find offensive and upsetting.

Chris Joannides should be condemning the images and jokes that appeared on his Facebook page. His stance on equality and fairness should have left no doubt in anyone's mind that those words were not acceptable.

FACED with a ten per cent council tax benefit cut from central Government in April, Enfield Council found itself between a rock and a hard place again last month.

The authority was told by the Government that it could come up with its own way of dealing with the reduction in funding as part of a new system known as council tax support, either by taxing some of its poorest residents more, or by cutting spending in other areas.

A 20 per cent flat rate for all working-age claimants was deemed to be the most proportionate option.

You could say this is fair, or argue it is a poll tax on some of the borough's poorest residents.

Either way, the real issue is that this Government's localism strategy seems to be based on providing a populist base for cuts – combining austerity with localism – simply by devolving the difficult decisions to cash-strapped local authorities.

How will reducing services at Chase Farm improve hospital?

I AM all for saving money and improving services, but could someone explain to me how making the accident & emergency department at Chase Farm Hospital a part-time service will improve it?

We have to assume that just by cutting the A&E hours at Chase Farm, the number of patients requiring it will not be reduced, but patients will attend another hospital instead such as Barnet or North Middlesex.

Therefore, we are just moving the cost/liability from one hospital to another.

Further, it will take longer for the ambulance service to go to Barnet or North Middlesex Hospital and we will probably need to increase the number of ambulance crew and ambulances – and the net effect will in fact actually cost more.

Has no one given this matter a thought? It would be nice to reduce the cost of administrative roles and spend the money on front-line services, but in the real world you need administration.

If you go on the NHS Jobs website, you will see a large number of new jobs where the pay is advertised at £100,000 where the staff with jobs at risk are being paid £22,000.

Again, I am at a loss to understand how money is being saved.

The NHS, when it was formed in 1948, was all about offering a health service for the public. Now it appears that the NHS could close within the next few years due to lack of funds.

If we are receiving a poorer service from the NHS, reduced numbers of police with police stations closing, a reduced fire service and having to work even longer to receive a state pension, to name but a few, then it is only fair we pay a far lower amount of money for these reduced services.

Howard Shaw
Fountain Crescent, Southgate

□ AT least 15,000 people marched in protest against proposals to close services at Lewisham Hospital in south London.

This reminds us of the massive marches in Enfield which started in 2005 – 5,000 to 10,000 with cross-party support, to save the same major services at Chase Farm Hospital which has no debts of its own.

During 2006/07, 76,248 letters and petitions were presented and ignored. The green-eyed monster has eyes on ground sales and degrading the hospital.

The NHS trust came into being to combine Barnet and Chase Farm hospitals as a management-only amalgamation, with no loss of the existing services at either hospital.

However, Barnet Hospital took out a large PFI debt to upgrade, leading to a large debt – and now it wants to borrow more to take Chase Farm Hospital's patients.

Added to that, North Middlesex Hospital upgraded its facilities to cater for its catchment area of patients using a huge PFI debt, which the hospital claimed it didn't think was sustainable at a later date.

It also requires further funding to accommodate Chase Farm patients.

The health authorities claim they are financially poor but keep borrowing more to centralise patients in fewer hospitals with add-on buildings.

The trusts and their counterparts made up of unelected people still make decisions and still intend to ignore the public outrage.

Our politicians have let us down and the money boys of the private sector and their investors rub their hands together in glee. It's outrageous.

Ivy Beard
Littlebrook Gardens, Cheshunt

□ JOAN Ryan has said Enfield North MP Nick de Bois should be doing more to fight the downgrade of Chase Farm (Advertiser, January 30). It would be funny if it wasn't so serious.

People like me remember that before the 2005 general election, Ms Ryan, as the then Labour MP, promised to great fanfare when the then health secretary John Reid visited Enfield that a whole new investment programme was lined up for Chase Farm Hospital.

Then, six months after being re-elected, Labour announced they would be downgrading Chase Farm.

That was a huge letdown for everyone who voted for her.

No wonder, given this and her prolific expenses claiming, that people voted for Mr Bois to replace her in 2010.

Millfield plays can compete with West End

AS André Rieu, the Johann Strauss Orchestra director once said, if he was to become the president of his country, he would give each and every soldier a violin to play instead of a lethal weapon.

It is a well-known fact that music and arts do bring people together and build communities in addition to renewing friendships.

We are very lucky to have places such as Millfield Theatre, in Silver Street, Edmonton, where productions are staged to suit every taste. They include music or plays suitable for all the family which can compete with most West End productions.

The Millfield Arts Centre complex has a number of facilities, including a library, thanks to Enfield Council's decision to bring back the library via the new ward priority fund scheme.

The library is visited by schools and members of the public and is open every day of the week.

At Millfield House, we have an advice surgery by the Haselbury ward councillors every first Thursday of the month from 7pm to 8pm.

No appointment is necessary but if you wish to see the ward councillors, please ring 020 8351 1385.

I ask each and everyone from near and far to support Millfield Theatre as without it, the community and the area around it will be a lot poorer.

Too divisive

CONGRATULATIONS to the Cuckoo Hall Academy Trust for its achievements as described by Michael Gove on his recent visit (Advertiser, January 23).

But where was he when two of our local authority heads were designated "super heads" for their outstanding achievements and results in their schools here in Enfield?

He appears at Cuckoo Hall bent on furthering his own political agenda of free schools which fragments and divides educational provision in our borough and which ignores the outstanding work of so many of Enfield's schools.

Pupils and staff delight in new school building

Academy has music studio, gym, theatre and dance studio

By Koos Couvée

koos.couvee@nlhnews.co.uk

PUPILS took members of the public on guided tours to mark the official opening of their new school building on Friday.

Oasis Academy Hadley, which is home to 1,200 primary and secondary school pupils, was previously located in Bell Lane, Enfield Wash, before moving to the building in South Street, Ponders End, two weeks ago.

The new facility contains a drama and dance studio, a theatre, a music studio, a gym and, to the pupils' delight, a rooftop terrace for summer barbeques.

Nural Saral, from Year 13, said: "Everyone likes the new school and is behaving well – it seems like everyone is more respectful.

"It is very different from the old building. We have breakout spaces with new computers where we can do our homework as well. I really like that."

Oasis Hadley is an all-through school, which specialises in maths with information and communications technology and music.

A reception class for primary school children was opened in 2010 and a nursery is expected to open this spring.

Oveta McInnis, deputy principal of the academy, said on Friday: "Today, at the official opening of our new building, we have been able to show that this academy is on the path of achieving outstanding results."

"We are delighted with our new building and we have settled in very well over the last two weeks."

"Our move has meant that we are working more effectively and students are very positive about the resources they now have access to."

Ayfer Orhan, Enfield Council's cabinet member for children and young people, told the Advertiser: "What I like about the school is that it is a modern architectural development with lots of natural light, high ceilings and big windows looking out into the community – the kids who attend get a sense of the community they are part of."

"I do want the government to recognise that local authorities need more financial ability to develop the same facilities at every school in Enfield."

The academy is sponsored by Oasis Community Learning, a Christian charity that delivers educational, healthcare and housing projects in the UK and abroad.

Oasis runs another academy, in Kinetic Crescent, Enfield Lock, and said it was aiming to open a third in Edmonton in September 2014.

Logging on: Bob Ladell and community cohesion leader Lynne Yazgan

By Mary McConnell

WILDLIFE enthusiasts have teamed up with art students as part of a project aimed at promoting a nature reserve in Winchmore Hill.

Art degree students at Barnet and Southgate College, in High Street, Southgate, have been inspired by Woodcroft Wildspace, in Woodcroft, Winchmore Hill.

The students have created sculptures from poplar trees that have been felled and produced different sign boards for their projects.

Pupils at Winchmore School, a specialist arts college in Laburnum Grove, Winchmore Hill, have also been invited to Woodcroft in order to use the space as inspiration for their art work.

The nature reserve was saved in 2011 following a campaign led by the chairman of Woodcroft Wildspace, Bob Ladell.

Enfield Council agreed to provide £100,000 to manage the land, although 35 per cent of the original plot was sold to developers for housing.

Mr Ladell said: "We have always maintained that this is an educational wildspace for the benefit of all of Enfield and we are saying that this is a cross-curriculum space, not just for art, or biology, but also for history and maths. It can be used for every subject.

"One of the big projects we can work on is the big felled logs that the students can turn into sculptures that will remain in the park.

"They will make small models of what they want and volunteers at the wildspace will help turn their artistic dreams into reality."

Mr Ladell added he was keen to see students at Woodcroft using cameras and sketch pads to capture their impressions of the space but was not worried about cigarette and crisp packets being left behind.

"That is all part of the education aspect," he said. "The same applies to dog walkers, for example. Most of them are now able, after a bit of nudging, to take their little bags away with them."

TAKE A LIFE-SAVING STEP TO PROTECT YOUR OLDER FRIENDS AND RELATIVES

As anyone who has elderly friends, neighbours or relatives will know, a quick visit for a cup of tea and a catch-up can often make the world of difference to older people living on their own.

And while many of the older generation are just hitting their prime, for some the little everyday things that used to take seconds can become harder as the years go by.

Testing their smoke alarm can often be among these - its position usually makes it harder to reach and changing the batteries becomes a tricky operation.

That's why the Fire Kills campaign is asking people to take a life-saving step to test their smoke alarms the next time they see an older neighbour, friend or family member. A working smoke alarm can give you and your loved ones the extra time you need in a fire to get out, stay out and call 999.

And those less able to move quickly, especially the older generation, will need those vital seconds more than most.

Last year in England, half of all deaths caused by accidental household fires were people aged 65 and over.

But despite these worrying statistics, surveys show that the vast majority of older people don't consider fire a risk, and most think that they would be able to get out of their home in time. In fact, you have less than two minutes to escape in a fire before the air becomes unbreathable and you're rendered unconscious, so an early warning is vital to make a safe escape.

Many older people who live alone, have difficulty moving or are simply a little forgetful are sometimes unable to test their own smoke alarms and might not be able to do so often enough. So by offering to test for them, you could give an older friend or relative the vital early warning they need if the worst should happen.

The Fire Kills campaign has offered some simple steps to take this winter to keep your older friends and relatives fire safe:

- Check they have smoke alarms at every level in their home and near potential fire risks.
- Test their smoke alarms whenever you visit to help give them the vital extra seconds they need to escape in a fire
- Look for electrical risks such as frayed wires and overloaded plugs to help reduce the risk in their home.
- Unplug appliances such as heaters and electric blankets when they're not in use.
- If you are a carer, make sure you close household doors at night

A huge variety of specialist safety equipment is also available to help give vulnerable people the best chance of escape in a fire. These include vibrating smoke alarms for the hard of hearing, easy-reach smoke alarm testers for those with limited movement and linked alarm systems - just a few options to help people feel safer.

A quick and simple step can provide the extra peace of mind of knowing that the people you care about will get the warning they need to escape in a fire. So next time you see your older family and neighbours, take a second to test their smoke alarms - it could be a life-saving move.

POLICE are hunting for a violent thug, a suspected sex trafficker and a suspected armed robber who are believed to have links to Enfield and Cheshunt.

They are among 18 men and women wanted by the Metropolitan Police's Extradition Unit.

It is believed that the foreign nationals – wanted in Poland and Albania – are currently in the UK.

Pawel Jakub Chmielorz, 27, a Polish national, was convicted in his absence of six counts of violence for a number of attacks that took place in Poland between 2006 and 2009.

Chmielorz, who is known to have links to Enfield and Edmonton, left his victims with Concerns about bogus charity collectors allayed

WORRIED residents concerned they had had handed over bank details to bogus callers can rest easy after a charity confirmed doorsteppers were bona fide fundraisers.

Residents of New Southgate were alarmed when people claiming to be from a reputable charity – the National Deaf Children's Society – called at homes in the area asking for donations.

One said that he had become suspicious when two different, but identically dressed young men claiming to be acting on behalf of a charity, called at his house on Friday January 25 and then again the following day.

Darren Beach, posting on the community forum Bowes and Bounds Connected, wrote: "They were both well-presented young men with leather-bound iPads to take down details, and badges dangling from their neck."

"Their get-up was identical other than on Friday it was a 'blind' charity, on Saturday a 'deaf' one."

Suspensions grew when the first caller told him it was his first day and that was why he did not have any photographic identification.

When the Advertiser contacted the NDCS, it confirmed that it did have fundraisers operating in the area on that day.

A spokeswoman from the charity said: "Like many other charities, NDCS employ the services of specialist fundraising organisations to help us attract supporters."

"Anyone who wishes to confirm that an NDCS fundraiser is genuine should contact us on 0845 231 1617 or check the door-to-door fundraising section of our website, www.ndcs.org.uk."

Hysni Sokolaj and Karol Koczmar, aka Michal Ura, are wanted by the Met Police for public's help to wanted foreigners serious head injuries and was sentenced to two-and-a-half years in prison.

Officers are also appealing for information about Albanian national Hysni Sokolaj, who is wanted by police investigating sex trafficking in Belgium and the UK.

The 40-year-old is known to have links to Cheshunt, as well as London and Leicester.

Karol Koczmar, 24, who uses the alias Michal Ura, is wanted in his native Poland in connection with a kidnapping in 2006 and an armed robbery in 2005.

Police believe that Koczmar has links to Edmonton and Tottenham.

Detective Sergeant Peter Rance, heading Operation Sunfire 3 for the Extradition Unit said: "I'm asking the public, do you recognise these faces? They are wanted to face justice for a multitude of crimes in other countries and it is in the UK's interests to help find them.

"If you have any information about these people, please call Crimestoppers so we can arrest them. If you see them, call 999 and do not approach them."

This is the third time the Met's Extradition Unit has run Operation Sunfire, aimed at putting criminals and suspected criminals before extradition courts to face justice abroad.

Anyone with information about the wanted men's whereabouts can call Crimestoppers anonymously on 0800 555 111.

Further details of all 18 people being sought by the police can be found online at www.crimestoppers-uk.org

Nine escape unhurt from house fires

FIVE people were rescued from a blaze in a flat in Palmers Green on Monday evening.

The fire brigade was called at 7.15pm and four fire engines from Edmonton, Tottenham and Southgate attended the incident in Hedge Lane, Palmers Green.

Firefighters rescued five people from the property. No one was seriously injured.

An ambulance crew arrived at 7.30pm and checked over a three-month-old baby and a 35-year-old man, who declined to go to hospital.

The flat was partly damaged in the blaze – believed to have been caused by a cigarette butt – which was brought under control at 8.06pm.

FOUR women escaped from a fire at a house in Grange Park in the early hours of yesterday morning.

Firefighters from Edmonton and Southgate stations were called to the house in Worlds End Lane, at 1.05am, to tackle a blaze which damaged part of the first floor of the property.

Four women escaped from the house unhurt before the fire brigade arrived.

The fire was under control by 1.30am.

The cause of the blaze is being investigated by the London Fire Brigade and the Metropolitan Police.

Caretaker charged with sexual abuse

A CARETAKER at an Enfield primary school is due to appear at Wood Green Crown Court today accused of sexual abuse.

John Lyon, 40, of Latymer Way, Edmonton, was suspended from his job at St Andrew's Church of England Primary, in Churchbury Lane, when the school discovered that police were investigating him over accusations of sexual assault on July 30 last year.

He stands accused of three counts of sexual assault, two against a minor, and one charge of common assault.

The alleged abuse did not involve St Andrew's pupils. Acting headteacher Christalla Jamil wrote a letter to parents on Thursday informing them of the police investigation.

Drug dealer jailed

A DRUG dealer caught with £24,000 of crack cocaine in his Bush Hill Park home has been jailed for six years.

Alex Upton Wright, 39, of Lathkill Close, was found guilty of possession with intent to supply at Wood Green Crown Court on January 24. He was sentenced the following day.

Following a raid carried out by officers from Enfield's Gangs Unit in June last year, 243g of crack cocaine and 280g of mixing agent were found in Wright's home, plus £7,000 in cash.

MP happy not to move goalposts

By Koos Couvée

koos.couvee@nlhnews.co.uk

EDMONTON MP Andy Love has expressed relief after proposals to alter the boundaries of his constituency were defeated in a House of Commons vote last week.

Changes to the Electoral Registration and Administration Bill were rejected by 334 votes to 292 on Tuesday last week.

It means that plans to redraw constituency boundaries will be postponed until 2018 at the earliest.

The Conservatives supported a review of constituency boundaries which would have seen the number of MPs cut from 650 to 600 – a move they said would save money.

But Labour MPs accused the Tories of manipulating constituencies in order to achieve an advantage in future elections.

Mr Love, inset, launched a Save Edmonton campaign in October 2011, in response to proposals by the Independent Boundary Commission – which is responsible for drawing up the boundaries of parliamentary constituencies – for a new Edmonton and Chingford constituency.

Had the plans gone ahead, it would have seen Edmonton Green, Jubilee and Lower Edmonton wards merged with Chingford.

The change, which would have seen Ponders End absorbed into Enfield North, was also opposed by Tory Work and Pensions Secretary Iain Duncan Smith, MP for Chingford and Woodford Green.

Following a consultation process that saw the Chingford merger thrown out, in December a revised plan was proposed which would see the current constituency merged with White Hart Lane, Northumberland Park, Bruce Grove and Tottenham Hale – all part of the existing Tottenham seat.

The new constituency, named Edmonton and Tottenham Hale, would lose Ponders End and Bush Hill Park.

According to Mr Love, this would produce an estimated 20,000 Labour majority.

The MP said: "I am glad the redrawing of constituency boundaries will be under further review. We campaigned strongly and successfully against the proposed merger with the Chingford constituency, which quite frankly was an absolutely ludicrous proposal.

"We accepted that the constituency may have to increase in size, and while the Edmonton and Tottenham Hale option isn't perfect, it is a much preferred option compared to merging with Chingford.

"This is about having a constituency that has a sense of community, geographical links and a certain semblance with electoral wards and the local authority."

Councillor blasts party politics after meeting walkout

By Ruth McKee

ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk

A CONSERVATIVE councillor made a dramatic exit from a residents' forum, claiming the meeting had turned into a "party political broadcast" for the Labour Party.

Henry Lamprecht, Tory councillor for Southgate Green ward, stormed out of the Bowes, Southgate Green and Palmers Green area forum on Tuesday night last week after slamming Labour councillors for ploughing ahead with the 24-item agenda.

Mr Lamprecht, pictured, told the Advertiser: "I walked out because in an area forum – the clue should be the name – it is for the local residents."

"What has happened under this Labour council is it has become a purely party political exercise."

"The meeting was nothing more than a party political broadcast for the Labour Party."

Mr Lamprecht said the long agenda covered issues that were not relevant to residents of his ward.

"They had a huge presentation about A&E services at Chase Farm – okay, it is an important issue – but Southgate residents do not use Chase Farm, they use the North Mid," he said.

Cllr Lamprecht added that with items on the agenda including the council budget and air quality reports from the area, residents were walking out throughout the meeting, seemingly as disenchanted as he was.

However, chairman of the meeting Labour councillor for Bowes Alan Sitkin said that he was disgusted at what he described as the "overt showmanship and histrionics" of Cllr Lamprecht.

"It is behaviour very unbecoming of a councillor," he said. "Throughout the meeting he had been trying to make political points about Southgate Town Hall and our decision to sell it off."

"But as we pointed out to him, the sell-off of the town hall was actually in the Conservative manifesto – so it was pure hypocrisy on his part."

And, according to Mr Sitkin, the irate Tory stormed out of the meeting complaining about the "red propaganda" of the Labour councillors.

In protest at the handling of the area forum, Mr Lamprecht is holding an alternative residents' meeting for his Southgate Green constituents tonight. It is taking place at the Penridge Banqueting Suite in Bowes Road, starting at 7pm.

THE SECRET EAVESDROPPERS

Jewish refugees helped war effort by listening in on Nazi prisoners' conversations at Trent Park

By Daniel O'Brien

daniel.obrien@nlhnews.co.uk

JEWISH refugees who listened in on Nazi prisoners of war being held at Trent Park during World War II have revealed they had no idea they were making history.

At the launch of The M Room: Secret Listeners Who Bugged The Nazis, a book by historian Helen Fry, Fritz Lustig and Eric Mark spoke of their time as part of a team of German and Austrian refugees given the task of listening in on captured officers staying at the bugged Trent Park estate.

Visitors to the event at the London

Jewish Cultural Centre, in North End Road, Golders Green, on Tuesday last week were also treated to a series of readings by relatives of the secret listeners and by TV and stage actor, Roger Lloyd Pack, who played Trigger in Only Fools And Horses.

Mr Lustig, who fled from Berlin to Britain in 1939 and now lives in Muswell Hill, said he was determined to do what he could to help defeat the Nazis.

"Our motivation to join the Army was in fact greater than our British colleagues," he told the 100-strong audience. "The British wanted to save their country, but they did not really know who they were fighting. We did. "I felt that sometimes, without being too bombastic, it was actually helping the war effort in ways other people might not have been doing.

"I didn't realise that we were making history."

Mr Mark, who fled to England in 1937 in response to the increasing hostility shown by the German government towards Jewish people, recalled long hours of carefully listening in on officers' conversations in the hope of catching information vital to the war effort.

He said: "I remember having ear-phones on, having a gramophone in front of me and putting the needle down if by any chance I heard that there was possibly interesting conversations being carried out."

The listeners gathered details of armaments and equipment and were also among the first to learn of the atrocities being committed in concentration camps in Poland, Germany and throughout Europe.

Mrs Fry praised the work of the two men, likening their contribution to that of the code breakers who intercepted Nazi radio transmissions.

"The work of these Germans and their colleagues was as important as the work at Bletchley Park," she said.

Environment matters

We are what we eat and breathe, and I welcome moves to improve this REACTIONS were mixed when the previous government banned smoking a few years ago, but we have recently discovered the number of children admitted to hospital after acute asthma attacks has fallen dramatically since this decision. This further demonstrates the correlation between health and air pollution – in this case, cigarette smoke – and the positive impact of smoke-free legislation.

Earlier this year experts, puzzled by the recent global decline in reported crime, cited compelling evidence of a causal link between lead pollution in the middle of the 20th century (caused by rapid increases in petrol use) to criminal behaviour 20 years later.

As the environmental levels of this known neurological toxin fell with the introduction of unleaded petrol, so, too, did the crime rate worldwide.

These two developments highlight the need to be vigilant regarding the vulnerability of human health and wellbeing to man-made, harmful variations in our environment where a complicated ecology means that outcomes may have multiple causes, and single causes multiple effects.

Hence the increasing public and political interest in the law

Casual criticism of what is sometimes called ‘the nanny state’ troubles me – I am delighted that enlightened policy makers legislate against smoking in public of unintended consequences. So casual criticism of what is sometimes called “the nanny state” troubles me.

I am delighted that enlightened policymakers legislate against smoking in public, lead in petrol, food additives and fatal pesticides.

Personal choice is one thing but my concern is public health and the cost of failure, not ideology.

A responsible nanny protects her charges from harm.

We are what we eat and breathe and I welcome moves by local and national government to protect us by improving water, air and food quality.

Therefore, though it received little coverage at the tail end of 2012, I would like to commend Enfield Council on the Good Food for London award in recognition of its leadership in promoting healthy and sustainable food in our schools and local supply chains.

Michael Lavender

Enfield Conservative group leader

Soundbite politics is not the way to do a proper assessment of services

DO we really need police stations or a police service? Fire stations or a fire and rescue service? Hospitals or healthcare?

Historically, these have amounted to the same thing – lose your police station and you lose all means of policing.

However, given modern developments in policing, fire prevention and healthcare, the two are now not necessarily the same. In fact, quite often the reverse is true.

An assessment of the respective performances of police, fire and health authorities through an analysis of their results in cutting crime and apprehending criminals, reducing incidences of fires and emergencies and reacting to them and in improving health and addressing illnesses and emergencies is far too detailed an exercise for the requirements of modern soundbite politics and beyond

Out of date? Do we still need police stations or is it better to have more bobbies on the beat?

the capacity of tweeters. For those who wish to partake in soundbite politics, it is easy to equate the provision of a service with the existence of a building, particularly if you are communicating with someone who never uses the service.

Besides, if you had to spell out on a placard the arguments for restructuring hospital services in north London and wave it around, given the consequent size of it, you would require the assistance of accident and emergency to treat the injuries sustained.

Perhaps it's safer to stick to “Save Chase Farm” – a much neater argument.

Local Conservatives remain consistent in their position – retain the buildings unless you can convince us that they are being replaced with a more effective service.

In relation to police services, we are convinced that more police on the beat is better than antiquated police stations, proposals to reduce fire stations have been shelved and we still need to be convinced that effective A&E and maternity services are provided if not at Chase Farm.

Illusions is a very apt Valentine's Day show

By Mary McConnell

AS part of a whirlwind tour of south-east England, Illusions is stopping off in Enfield Town on Valentine's Day.

Ramin Gray's production of Ivan Viripaev's acclaimed play is embarking on a second tour after being performed at various venues from Bristol to Edinburgh last year.

Illusions unravels the story of two couples as they look back at their lives. It tells a tale of roads taken and those passed by as a result, of understandings and misunderstandings and of the dangers of voicing certain thoughts, while leaving others unsaid.

"It is a deceptively simple play," explains director Ramin.

"It is about love, which is the most universal part of being human. It's the one thing we can all relate to, the one thing we search for all our lives.

"Romeo and Juliet is probably, after Hamlet, Shakespeare's most famous play for that very reason.

"This play is looking at, in a very different way, that experience of being in love. Love is incredibly difficult to find, to find real true love, and if you manage to find it, it is incredibly easy

NINA SOLOGBENKO

Talking things through: Illusions is being performed at the Dugdale Centre next week to mess it up."

The play's title, according to Ramin, is about the illusions that we may experience when we fall in love.

"You can get trapped by illusions and you can create those illusions for yourselves," he said.

"Illusions is about who the other person is, about the fact that they make us feel X, Y or Z."

The play is just over an hour in length, which might lead some to compare it with Constellations, which has been wowing critics in the West End. However, Ramin says that the length of the play is where the similarities with Illusions end.

"This play is almost the opposite of Constellations," he explains.

"Constellations has lots of short, witty lines and is very stop-start, whereas Illusions has long, flowing speeches which requires you to concentrate.

"This play is from Russia, so in a way it is like it is from Mars.

"Although it is not going to look like a Chekhov play, it is different to English plays."

Illusions will be at the Dugdale Centre, in London Road, Enfield, at 8pm on February 14. Tickets cost £12-£15. Call the box office on 020 8807 6680 to book.

On the spot: Andre Grant interviewed George MacKay, centre, and Simon Reade

Schoolboy gets the goss from film star

By Mary McConnell

A BUDDING young reporter has scooped an exclusive interview with the screenwriter and star of a new film about World War I.

Ten-year-old Andre Grant, from Edmonton, interviewed George MacKay, the star of Private Peaceful, and Simon Reade, who wrote the screen adaptation, thanks to the education charity Filmclub.

Private Peaceful, based on the novel by War Horse author Michael Morpurgo, is out now on DVD.

The interview was part of the charity's week of webcasts aimed at highlighting National Storytelling Week.

The trio discussed how Reade took the story of a wartime romance from the page to the silver screen and the challenges which MacKay faced acting in intense battle scenes filled with explosions and smoke.

George said of the interview: "I thought it was brilliant. I had a great time and Andre was absolutely top."

Simon added: "The questions from Andre were very together and professional, very genuine questions and not things we've been asked before."

Andre, who goes to Galliard

Primary School, in Galliard Road, Edmonton, was chosen earlier this year from hundreds of applicants to be a young reporter for Filmclub.

He has received special training as part of its talent development scheme to hone his interviewing skills.

Andre has also interviewed animators from Tim Burton's latest film Frankenweenie and spoken to the stars on the red carpet at the gala screening of Hotel Transylvania.

Andre's interview was broadcast live for Filmclub's 220,000 membership to enjoy and is available to watch online at www.filmclub.org

Fish and chip newcomers net awards recognition

By Mary McConnell

A FISH and chip restaurant is celebrating being named London's newcomer of the year.

Fish and Chips @ London Road, which opened its doors in November 2011, was runner-up in the best newcomer category of the National Fish and Chip Awards.

To celebrate their success, owners John and Dawn Phantis are offering half-price cod and chips at their restaurant, in London Road, Enfield, next Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Following the awards ceremony, at the Lancaster Hotel in London, Dawn said: "We feel quite proud of it. It is lovely for the whole team."

"Obviously, it is great for me and John - but it's brilliant for the waiting staff, the people who work behind the takeaway counter. They all worked so hard for it."

Fish and Chips @ London Road was one of only two restaurants in the capital named as finalists.

And Dawn said that she was delighted to bring some attention back to London.

"It makes everything that we have done worthwhile," she added.

"Many of the previous winners had been from outside London. It is really good quality food but it is no more expensive than going for pizza."

"I think that we showed a little bit of ambition."

The awards, which were hosted by comedian Rory Bremner, have been running for 25 years.

And Dawn and John said they were determined to build on this success. They are hoping to enter the main awards category next year.

"It is a tough market at the moment," added Dawn. "It doesn't matter what business you are in, you have got to work really hard."

"We work really hard to give customers a good product."

"We have got many regular customers but we are always trying to get more people."

FAMILY ANNOUNCEMENTS

Chance meeting on a train led to 70 years of marriage

Joan and Basil mark platinum anniversary with a family meal

By Koos Couvée

A COUPLE who met on a train almost 73 years ago enjoyed a meal with relatives to celebrate their platinum wedding anniversary.

Joan Sharp, 89, and Basil Lawrence, 91, of Linden Way, Southgate, were joined by family members at Hunters of Cockfosters restaurant, in Cockfosters Road, last Wednesday to celebrate 70 years of marriage.

The couple first met on their way to work on a train to Liverpool Street station in 1940. When they saw each other on a second train journey, Basil asked Joan on a date to the cinema.

In 1941, Basil volunteered for the RAF and went to Canada for training. But as soon as he returned to London in 1942 he proposed to Joan who, besides working as an underwriter at Lloyds Bank, had joined the Enfield first aid post as a volunteer.

The couple married on January 30 1943.

After the war Joan brought up the couple's four children while, from 1954 onwards, Basil worked at Universal Matthey Products in Brimsdown until he retired in 1986.

His wife went back to work in 1969, at the Palmers Green press cuttings agency Romeike & Curtice until her retirement, also in 1986.

Over the years the happily married couple have travelled to many parts of the world including the USA, New Zealand and across Europe.

Their hobbies included ballroom dancing and badminton, which they gave up in 2002 and 2008 respectively, but still enjoy gardening.

Asked what has kept them together all these years, Joan said: "We believe that the secret to a long and happy marriage is that you have a good sense of humour and that you are tolerant of one another."

"Having your family around also helps bring you together."

"We have a tight-knit family and we meet often, sometimes in small groups and sometimes we have large gatherings."

A family get-together to celebrate the couple's anniversary was held on December 27.

The occasion was attended by more than 40 family members, including son Richard and his family, who live in San Francisco, in the US.

Joan and Basil have four children, ten grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren, who they said keep their minds active and spirits alive.

St Andrew the Apostle Greek Orthodox School

FOUNDING TEACHERS

The first Greek Orthodox Secondary School in the country opens in September 2013.

When it opens on the Barnes/Enfield borders in September 2013, St Andrew the Apostle Greek Orthodox School will be the first Greek Orthodox secondary school in the country to have been established by the academy sponsor the Russell Education Trust and the Greek Orthodox Church. This mainstream comprehensive school will admit 150 pupils, of all faiths and beliefs, into Year 7 in September 2013 and then build to a full capacity of 1050 by 2015. There is already a significant level of parental application for Year 7 entry in September 2013 from both Greek Orthodox and other local parents.

The Russell Education Trust opened the largest free schools in both 2011 (Bristol Free School) and 2012 (Becket Keys Church of England School). It opens St Andrew the Apostle School and King's Church of England School this September. RET is committed to all its schools being good or outstanding at first inspection. For this reason teachers joining RET schools enjoy exceptional professional support and development.

St Andrew the Apostle will reflect the Christian beliefs on which it is founded and provide an outstanding academic experience for the very able but it will also be an inclusive school in which children with SEND or from disadvantaged backgrounds also make exceptional progress.

We are seeking to appoint our founding teachers, including an Assistant Headteacher and Core Subject Coordinators. In appointing our initial team of staff, we will be balancing leadership experience, curriculum expertise and student support in three levels of post:

- Assistant Headteacher L11-15
- Core Subject Coordinators TLR1
- Teachers MPS

We are determined to appoint the best possible founding team so the number and level of these posts may be varied to suit the successful candidates. To ensure we achieve an 'Outstanding' judgement from Ofsted at our first full inspection, you will need to be an excellent classroom practitioner able to teach in more than one subject initially.

If you are confident you can rise to these challenges then visit our website www.standrewtheapostle.org.uk to register your interest and to receive more information and a recruitment pack.

The closing date for applications for AHT and Core Subject Coordinators is the end of the working day on Tuesday 12th February. Applications for other teaching posts must be received on or before Tuesday 5th March.

Our policies, procedures and practices reflect our commitment to equality and diversity. Individuals will be selected for appointment based purely on their suitability for the post.

DAWSON'S DELIGHT AT WEST BROM WIN

By Dominique Stafford

MICHAEL DAWSON hailed Tottenham Hotspur's display on Sunday as they got back to winning ways with a 1-0 triumph at West Bromwich Albion.

Spurs have impressed on their travels in the Premier League this season and had already recorded six away victories prior to the weekend – but they had only drawn their previous two outings on the road at basement side Queens Park Rangers and slumping Norwich City.

However, a fine Gareth Bale strike midway through the second half was enough for them to emerge victorious at the Hawthorns as Tottenham closed to within a point of third-placed Chelsea.

And Dawson, back in favour after struggling to feature in the side in the early stages of the season, believes that Sunday's win could prove to be a significant result.

"Away games in the Premier League are never easy," he said. "We've had some tough away matches recently, QPR, Leeds in the FA Cup, Norwich in midweek and now West Brom.

"In the first half at Norwich we didn't play as well as we would have liked, but we took a point in the second half.

"When you go to West Brom you have to weather the storm sometimes, we did that and Hugo Lloris made a couple of good saves.

"In the second half they went down to ten men and it made the game easier for us. I thought we kept the ball well, passed it, kept possession. They tried to press us late on, but it was another big win for us."

The match saw recently signed German international midfielder Lewis Holtby continue the encouraging start to his Tottenham career by impressing after coming on as a first-half substitute for the injured Jermain Defoe.

Pleased with performance: Michael Dawson was thrilled by Tottenham's win at West Bromwich Albion on Sunday

Having only arrived at the club last week, the Germany under-21 captain admitted that he is delighted to have made the move to English football.

"I have been living my dream for the past few days," he said. "I am playing at an absolute top club in the Premier League. It's been overwhelming since arriving in the motherland of football.

"I realised immediately that the speed and the toughness really is different here to the Bundesliga. The game is brutally hard, but that suits me and I really love it.

"I also loved my second game for Spurs, in which a dream goal from Gareth meant I could celebrate my first win.

"I will never forget this game against West Brom. The fans sang a song for me for almost all of the second half. It was incredible and I really had goosebumps. I had never expected such support so soon."

Special ticket deal for Hemel encounter

THE London Skolars are set to step up their preparations for the new rugby league campaign by hosting the Scottish Exiles in a pre-season friendly on Sunday.

The Skolars were crushed 74-6 by Super League outfit London Broncos last month in their only outing to date, and Sunday's clash is the first of two other games – followed by a showdown against the Combined Services under-23s on February 16 – to help them prepare for their first competitive match in March.

Meanwhile, the Skolars have announced that they will be offering half-priced admission for their opening home game of the campaign.

The side will be hosting the Hemel Stags in the Northern Rail Cup on March 10, and the club have confirmed that anyone booking tickets before February 22 will be charged £6 for an adult ticket and £3 concessions.

"We want to really celebrate the meeting of our two clubs and get a large crowd for the game," said Skolars' general manager Howard Kramer.

"We will be hosting junior games between the two clubs during the morning and we also have a great entertainment programme planned."

"We welcome Hemel Stags into Championship One as this can only strengthen the professional game in the South."

Tickets can be purchased from the Skolars online ticket office at www.skolarsrl.com

Young cricketers book a spot at Lord's

HARINGEY'S boys' team have booked a date at the home of cricket after securing a spot in the Balfour Beatty London Youth Games Indoor Cricket Finals over the weekend.

The side sealed their place at Lord's by topping group eight of Saturday's qualifying event at Harrow Leisure Centre, winning both their matches convincingly.

Haringey's opening match against Enfield saw them amass 112 batting first, before producing a terrific bowling display to restrict their opposition to just 27 in reply.

And they were equally convincing victors against Kingston upon Thames – winning by 95 runs after scoring 121 in their ten overs.

"We were really pleased with how the day went," said team manager John Beckett. "We won both games comfortably in the end, although we had a bit of a scare in the first game.

"We were 16-3 and it looked like it could all go wrong, but the boys put a score on the board and went on to bowl the opposition out cheaply. It was a really good all-round performance.

"The finals will be a fantastic day and it will be a great experience to play at the home of cricket. I'm sure all the teams will be really strong, and we will just look to enjoy it and get as far as we can."

This weekend sees the girls' qualifying rounds taking place, with the finals being held at Lord's on March 3.
